Varieties in this sub-group were chosen for their large, substantial landscape presence and unique flower colors.

‘Pink Lemonade’ Baptisia (False Indigo)
- Unique bicolor pattern
- Flowers open light yellow
- As flowers mature, they turn to a dusky raspberry purple
- 12in long flower scapes have charcoal stems

‘Pink Truffles’ Baptisia (False Indigo)
- Clear soft pink blossoms with a pale yellow keel—a unique color for Baptisia
- Flowers lighten to a pale lavender pink with age
- Vase-shaped habit with medium green foliage
Hybridized and selected for their shorter, more compact habit and unique flower colors, DECADENCE® Baptisias are scaled to fit easily into today’s home gardens. Their showy spring blooms add colorful flair followed by decorative seed pods which add interest to the fall garden.

Baptisia is an ancient perennial that was first used by Native Americans to make indigo dyes. It can be found growing naturally in meadows, tolerating heat and drought with ease and resisting deer browsing too. Be sure to choose a permanent location when planting Baptisia since mature plants resent being disturbed.

DAISY MAY® Leucanthemum superbum (Shasta Daisy)

• The gold standard in white daisies
• Large 3in wide, pure white flowers form a solid dome of bloom
• Reblooms multiple times throughout the season if cut back
• Compact, healthy deep green foliage with strong stems
Bee Balm typically bloom in midsummer, but the Leading Lady Series leads the way in early summer, flowering earlier and forming a more petite clump than other varieties. This series typically blooms from early summer (first week of June in Michigan) into midsummer and grows just a foot tall.

Sprite Series (Woodland Phlox)

A new spring blooming Phlox that behaves differently than the standard Phlox subulata. Unlike the standard Creeping Phlox, the members of this series do not spread aggressively, rather, they form a low, mounding habit of star-shaped flowers. This variety also blooms a week or so later than Phlox subulata, great for extending the spring color of your garden. As an added bonus—although it prefers full sun, this Phlox will tolerate very light shade.
